

Megan in line for top award

GLENDALOUGH teenager Megan Ward has made it through to the finals of the prestigious 2002 Training Excellence Awards.

The 19-year-old is a finalist in the McDonald's Trainee of the Year category. The awards showcase the State's best in vocational education and training by recognising excellence in individuals and organisations.

Megan started her traineeship in Certificate II in Business (Office Administration) and began with general reception duties at Concert and Corporate Productions, a company that specialises in lighting production and event management.

She quickly adopted the duties of payroll and other administrative duties. Gradually she became office manager as well as assistant to the director.

In just over a year she completed her Certificate II and her Certificate III.

State winners share in a prize pool worth about $85,000 and some category winners will go on to compete at the Australian Training Awards in Sydney in November.

Winners will be announced at a gala presentation evening at Burswood's Grand Ballroom on August 30.

Megan Ward has excelled as a trainee.
